Introduction

Clark Gardner's practice focuses on commercial litigation and professional liability matters. Before joining Snow Christensen & Martineau, Clark worked at a personal injury firm where he sought justice for injured plaintiffs.

Clark received his J.D. from Gonzaga University School of Law. He also received his M.B.A. from Gonzaga University Graduate School of Business. During law school, Clark served as an Associate Editor of Gonzaga Law Review and completed an externship for Judge George B. Fearing at the Washington State Court of Appeals in Spokane, WA.

Before law school, Clark graduated from Brigham Young University's Marriott School of Business with a bachelor's degree in business management. His emphasis was in organizational behavior and human resources.
